CLEVELAND, Ohio.- Former President Donald Trump (pictured), the presumptive nominee for the Republican nomination for president, is scheduled to visit Ohio this weekend to stomp for U.S. Senate candidate Bernie Moreno, whom he has endorsed.

The former president is slated to speak Saturday at the Buckeye Values PAC rally at Wright Bros. Aero Inc.in Dayton at 4 p.m., with doors opening at 12 p.m.

Moreno will square off with state Sen. Matt Dolan and Ohio Secretary of State Frank LaRose for Ohio's March 19 primary, and whether Trump can push him over the finish line remains to be seen. The winner will face current Democratic U.S. Sen Sherrod Brown, a Cleveland Democrat, in November.

Trump, who won Ohio when he ran for president in 2016 and in 2020, the latter of which he ultimately lost to current President Joe Biden, endorsed U.S. Sen J.D. Vance, who won over Democrat Tim Ryan for the Senate in 2022 with his help.
